A movie entitled "The Last Will and Testament of Tom Smith" was shown to the committee. Committee chairmen were named at the meeting last evening and the quotas which were set for each district were announced. Heading the Industry and Corporate Gifts Committee is William H. H. Fine. John P. Betz, Jr., was named chairman of the committee on organizations. Joseph Elbertson was named publicity director. Bristol Schools will be under the direction of Warren P. Snyder and the Bristol Township schools will be under the direction of Andrew Jackson. The general treasurer of district 3 is Lester D. Thorne.

WHEREAS: The organizations which will participate in this fund include such well known agencies as United Service Organization, the United Seamen's Service, War Prisoner's Aid, Belgian War Relief Society, British War Relief Society, French Relief Fund, Friends of Luxembourg, Greek War Relief Association, Norwegian Relief, Polish War Relief, Queen Wilhelmina Fund, Russian War Relief, United China Relief, United Czechoslovak Relief, United Yugoslav Relief Fund, Refugee Relief Trustees and United States Committee for The Care of European Children.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Election Significance

Washington, Nov. 4. TWO outstanding facts emerge from the recent election returns. Obviously, one is that the tide which began to run strongly against the Administration in 1942 has gathered speed and volume. In New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Kentucky and Virginia the vote left no doubt of that.

UNQUESTIONABLY, Republicans have sound ground for feeling that their chances of capturing the White House next year are good, var or no war, fourth-term effort by Mr. Roosevelt or the nomination of some other Democrat. New Deal politicians are not in position to deny this because they admitted it prior to the verdict—and in all these States appealed for support with the argument that failure of the Democratic candidates would be a blow to Mr. Roosevelt.

IT WAS, for example, Senator Barkley, Administration floor leader, who impassionately told his Kentucky constituents that "the eyes of the nation" were upon them and failure to elect the Democrat would be viewed as a "repudiation of the President's program in its entirety." Few expected the Republicans to win there. The extraordinary result probably makes the Republican Kentucky victory most significant of all. Nor can the pained denial of any national issue by National Democratic Chairman Frank Walker erase from the record those prophetic words of Senator Barkley, which undoubtedly he wishes now he had never uttered. In New York and New Jersey, too, statements similar to that of Senator Barkley were made by New Deal spokesmen. In New York, the President personally urged the

LEWIS TOPS ROOSEVELT

John L. Lewis, chief blatherskite of labor, has scored another whopping victory over Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Most citizens are aware by now, much to their disgust, that had the President wanted to cut the legs out from under the truculent Lewis at the height of the recent coal strike, he could have invoked the Smith-Connally anti-strike law which Congress, incensed by Lewis' wartime perfidy, had enacted over the Chief Executive's veto.

Instead, the President let the coal controversy get away from him completely. At a time when every ton of coal mined was urgently needed to keep the wheels of industry spinning out vital war armament, the Man in the White House chose to temporize with labor's most notorious bully.

The President's "stern warning" that Federal government would intervene if the miners didn't come to heel must have convulsed Lewis with "belly laughs" when he considered the raw insincerity of that promise. Hadn't he bested Roosevelt time and again? Hadn't he forced the President to pull in his horns on other strike showdowns? Hadn't he made it clear to the potential Fourth Term candidate that if labor was kicked around by the administration its votes might be more readily conferred upon some other Presidential hopeful, possibly a Republican?

When the War Labor Board refused to grant Lewis' boisterous demands for a wage boost comparable to the Illinois contract he had negotiated some months before, did the boss man of labor openly defy the Smith-Connally law by ordering his men out on strike? He did not. That would have been too crude for a man of John L. Lewis' genteel ideas on how to blackmail humanity. It isn't difficult to envision the crafty Lewis, enraged by the War Labor Board's rebuff, gathering his policy committee about him and making plans to covertly "put the boot" to the mining industry and the war be damned.

We all know how the strike started. "Unauthorized walk-outs", that overworked apology of the smirking Lewis, began popping up overnight until a general exodus of miners, resembling a prairie fire in a high wind, forced complete shutdown of all mines in the bituminous and anthracite fields, thereby accomplishing the same ugly purpose as though an official strike proclamation had been issued.

Rather a neat and insidious piece of skulduggery, what? When thousands of war plants and factories, their stock piles exhausted, started clamoring frantically for coal, the next step in the President's farcical program to clamp down on rebellious miners was to order the government to take over all privately-owned mines. He immediately issued a dramatic appeal to miners, pointing out that it was their "patriotic duty" to work for the government. American flags were hoisted on all confiscated properties and as promptly ignored by pit workers who made it clear that any action taken would be motivated by the policy committee dominated by Lewis. So who, after all, was the man behind the scenes?

The President, fearing public censure over war production delay, authorized Harold L. Ickes, so-called "manager of seized coal mines", to effect a "wage settlement" with striking miners which practically gave them the same pay increase rejected by the War Labor Board. John L. Lewis, haughtier than ever, expressed "satisfaction" with the new agreement and then, according to the press, "called off the three day general coal strike" which had threatened war industries with total paralysis.

If the bumptious Lewis was in a position to "call off" the strike, after gaining his point, why, in the name of all that is reasonable, couldn't he have nipped the "unauthorized walk-outs" at their inception if he had had the nation's wartime interest at heart?

The answer should be obvious. John L. Lewis is a pernicious

FULL OF EXCITEMENT

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Nov. 5.—The weirdest train ever seen or heard in these parts is due to arrive on schedule when the curtain opens on "The Ghost Train," at Bensalem high school, November 11th and 12th. The story is centered about the legend of a phantom train that deals death to anyone who sees it. A group of passengers, marooned in the tiny station at Rockland, Maine, are warned of its approach. The news causes all manner of excitement and throws them into a panic. One, however, even more frantic and silly than the rest, eventually solves the mystery, exposes a band of rum-runners and narcotic smugglers and proves himself to be the hero of the evening. There is a surplus of fun and thrills in this sensational play, and

"Best Foot Forward" Is Coming To The Grand

What happens when a movie star accepts an invitation to a college prom, much to the consternation of the fan who invited her, forms the background for the hijinks on the screen of the Grand Theatre where the Technicolor scintillating musical, "Best Foot Forward," is showing Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Lucille Ball plays a movie star who accepts a fan letter invitation from young Tommy Dix to attend the prom as a publicity stunt. Lucille has her doubts about the whole affair but her press agent, William Gaxton, is confident the resulting fanfare will turn the trick of having her option picked up. Tommy, who never expected Lucille to accept, is devastated, but not from joy. For he has invited his best girl, Virginia Welder, to the dance and besides, Winsocki tradition does not include movie stars.

HALF WAY TO GOAL

Allied strategy points toward an all-out assault to force Nazi Germany's unconditional surrender at the earliest moment while stepping up the drive against Japan in whatever degree may be possible while the conflict remains global in character.

Russia has Hitler's war machine on the verge of military disaster and is pressing the western Allies to throw everything they have into the campaign for a quick knockout. When and in what manner the Allies will respond is not to be known before the event, but the resources available for the final windup are immense.

The sinews of war now accumulating around the shaking borders of Hitler's fortress are aimed at completion of half of civilization's global task. When the last opposition is eliminated in Europe, the Allies will move eastward through the Mediterranean Sea and the Indian Ocean to confront Japan with an irresistible array of armed might.

Japan realizes what is ahead and is preparing frantically to meet the menace. The Japs know Hitler is doomed to defeat. They hope to organize the manpower and the industrial production of their empire to make the task of conquering Nippon discouraging to the Allies. The Japs predict that they will hold out for five years and that at the end of that period the Allies will be too exhausted to continue.

It is impossible, of course, for the Japs to conceive what they will be up against in the final phase of the conflict. The driving force of that power will lay waste everything that is found in its path.

AIR PREDICTION

One of the hopeful pronouncements as to the effect of the air war is that made by Brig. Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, commander of America's heavy bombardment division in Britain, who predicts that by next spring Germany's ability to wage war will be a thing of the past because systematic bombing during the winter will destroy her war industry.

"The only real defense Germany can offer against our bombers," says the general, "is to destroy them on the ground or in the factories. Obviously she can do neither."

The full effect of the American type of bombing, according to the LeMay thesis, is not yet fully felt, but it is only a matter of time until it will be reflected in weaker aerial opposition to increasingly large formations of American and British bombers. From that point on deterioration of German aerial defense will be rapid and, once the Luftwaffe is knocked out of the skies, Germany will be helpless.

Germany has an estimated 2,500 to 3,500 fighter planes, but production is believed to be declining because of bomber attacks on factories. When replacements are no longer forthcoming to maintain the fighter force at this reduced level, Germany will be out of it as an air contender.

"THAT KEITH WOMAN"

by PHYLLIS MOORE GALLAGHER

SYNOPSIS

Letty Randolph, society reporter, persuaded distraught Pamela Keith not to cancel her daughter Sandra's debut, scheduled for that afternoon. "That Keith woman," as Letty's mother termed her, had long figured prominently in the news. At 19, her elopement with Wayne Courtney, young medical student, was promptly annulled by her parents. Later, in South America, she met wealthy Richard Keith, who divorced his wife, Gladys Newcomb Keith, so he could marry Pam. Richard was killed in an auto accident soon after their daughter Sandra's birth. Now, twenty years later, after many romantic interludes, Pam was engaged to likable Luke Cramer, though everyone had expected he would marry Gladys, Richard Keith's ex-wife. Letty, en route to Sandra's party, took a short cut through the hedge to the Keith mansion, which adjoined her hotel. She observed the stark fear in Pam's eyes as she welcomed her guests, while Sandra seemed grimly angry, especially when she greeted Victor Corliss, with whom she was in love. Letty was thrilled when Countess Fanella Castigena presented handsome Peter Gibson, but she bristled when he told her he had crashed the party. Later, at a small dinner party, Letty saw that Pam had surrounded herself with the most antagonistic people: Elsie Eustace and her husband Marvin, whose name had been linked romantically with Pam's; Dr. Wayne Courtney, her first husband, recently returned to Washington after fifteen years abroad; Countess Castigena, whose biography she had written; and Gladys Newcomb, from whom Pam had annexed two men. Letty noticed Reginald, the Keith butler, eyeing Gladys. Sandra had gone on to the club with her deb friends. Pam's frightened manner clung to her, even after Luke Cramer phoned from Philadelphia. Gladys directed a malevolent look at her hostess, as Pam explained that Luke was ill. Letty, anxious to write her story of Sandra's debut, left shortly before ten o'clock. Near the opening in the hedge, she saw a shadowy figure creeping toward the rear of Pam's house. Letty was attacked by the prowler, but escaped after biting his neck. Later, she changed her torn gown and set out for Pam's house. Horrified, she discovers Pam's body lying near the hedge. Peter Gibson, who was not present at the dinner, is among the first to answer Letty's hysterical screams. She is telling the story.

CHAPTER NINE

"She's dead," Dr. Courtney pronounced quietly.

The Countess said, "Do we have to call the police? Do we?"

Earle Pines seemed to materialize suddenly out of a shadow. He was perfectly calm. "Yes, the police will have to know," he replied. "I'll notify them now."

Out of the tails of my eyes I watched Earle's short, barrel body start off across the lawn in a heavy, thrashing course. He paused once, irresolute, swaying a little. Then he seemed to straighten and, with a bold swagger, went on. It occurred to me that for all Earle's calmness at the scene of this hideous crime, he wasn't really calm. Not inwardly.

Reginald, the butler, stiff white shirt glistening in the moonlight, was standing rigid, unpenetrable, his black eyes fastened upon the corpse defile. As I watched him, moment and find Mother scolding me for chucking myself full of cheeseburgers before going to bed. But it wasn't a nightmare; Pamela Keith had been murdered. . . . And there was Peter Gibson saying gently: "Feeling better, Letty?"

I nodded.

"Tell us what happened."

I did, trying to remember every detail, but . . . I decided not to mention my brief wrestling match with the Unknown just before ten o'clock.

Suddenly Gladys Newcomb said, "Why, Letty, dear, you've changed your dress, haven't you?"

Gladys seemed quite in control of herself now and I knew what was going through that agile brain of hers. Anger boiled up in me, and my arteries did a year's hardening in two seconds. "No, I haven't changed my dress!" I snapped. "I just stepped into a tank of purple dye and here I am."

"Now-w, Letty," Gladys New-

"Why, Peter Gibson, what are you doing here? You left Pamela's hours ago!"

"That's really none of your business, Fanella," answered Peter in cold, searing tones.

"Now-w, Peter," cooed Fanella. "I just wondered!"

No one meant anything. Everyone just wondered!

But the police would mean a great deal when they asked Peter Gibson why he was here. A sinister thought cat-tailed through my brain. I turned and looked at Peter again, realizing he had been the focal point of all my excitement for the last few hours.

He certainly didn't look like a murderer. But then, what do murderers look like? Don't they sometimes look like such cherubs of innocence and goodness and loving kindness that people nickname them Baby Face and Pretty Boy?

Cranberries Do Double Duty

By BETTY BARCLAY

Market stalls are once again gay with bright red cranberries, so traditional to the American table and so dear to the American heart. Their bright color, tart flavor and excellent "pop-up" qualities have always filled a popular place on the table. And right now they are doubly in demand to help pick up dull wartime menus. So put cranberries on your shopping list to make up your family's favorite sauce.

And be sure to save enough to make up this new cranberry mold, too. It's so easy to prepare and can be used in so many ways, no wonder it's called All Purpose Mold. You'll like it served as an appetizer, as a plain salad, as a main dish salad, as a dessert, as a relish or as a dress up for left-overs.

Here are just a few suggestions for fillings. You'll add others of your own once you've tried the recipe.

All-Purpose Cranberry Mold

2 cups sugar
1 cup water
4 cups fresh cranberries
1 envelope plain gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
Grated rind 1 orange
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Boil sugar and water together for 3 minutes. Add cranberries and cook slowly, without stirring, until cranberry skins pop open — about 5 minutes. Soften gelatin in cold water; dissolve in hot sauce. Add grated orange rind and lemon juice and cool. Transfer to ring mold and chill until firm.

To Serve:

As A Relish—Unmold and serve plain or garnish with balls of cottage cheese rolled in chopped parsley.

As A Salad—Unmold and fill center with Cranberry Cabbage Salad. Serve with French Dressing.

As A Dessert—Unmold and fill center with cut up fresh fruit or Easy Orange Sponge. Garnish with sections of cut oranges.

Easy Orange Sponge

1 cup orange juice
18 marshmallows

Place orange juice and marshmallows in upper part of double boiler and melt. Beat with a fork until completely mixed. Chill thoroughly and pile by spoonfuls in center of cranberry mold.

Cranberry Cabbage Salad

3 cups shredded cabbage

1 tablespoon minced onion
½ cup diced celery

1 cup Cranberry-Orange Relish
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup vinegar

Mix ingredients together lightly with a fork. Marinate in refrigerator for one hour. Serve with greens as a salad or plain as a relish with the main dish of the meal. It is particularly good with stuffed eggs.

Cranberry-Orange Relish

(No Cooking)

4 cups fresh cranberries
2 oranges
2 cups sugar

Put cranberries through food chopper. Quarter whole oranges, remove seeds and put through chopper. Add sugar and mix well. Chill in refrigerator a few hours before serving. Makes 1 quart relish. This sauce will keep well in the refrigerator for several weeks. For extra zip, add ½ lemon, with seeds removed; put through food chopper with cranberries and oranges.

ed, Mr. Snyder said that Ralph DeDonado brought with him a wealth of knowledge of the organization details of such a school and also brought good instructors.

"We hope that Bristol will maintain vocational training here after the war is over, and we hope to be in a position to get good equipment which may be purchased at a fraction of its original cost."

Mr. Snyder said that there will be a lot of re-training to do after the war, and that such training will be just as important as it is now at the present time. He mentioned the fact that service men returning from the army will need retraining for community needs and that such training will have to be given "unless we are to let the boys down."

Mr. Snyder stated that the training of girls in six to eight weeks is a remarkable credit to the girls who want to learn.

It was the contention of the speaker that every community should have vocational training school so that when mechanics are needed they will be available. "Our average girl and boy can be trained to be mechanics better than the boys and girls from any other country in the world."

election of the Democratic candidate and full Administration support was given.

OF COURSE, it is not wise to put complete reliance upon trends. They can be reversed. It is true that, in the past, invariably Presidential election results have accurately reflected Congressional and State elections in the two preceding years. But, this time there is the war; there is the "Commander in Chief" appeal; there is self-seeker with a monumental record of brute cunning who places a love of power above love of country.

Senator Harry F. Byrd, Virginia Democrat, who has frequently crossed swords with the New Deal, said it "is a national disgrace that one man has the power and uses that power to suspend completely the mining of bituminous coal."

Senator Byrd, a courageous leader of national thought, poised this question: "Can anyone say John L. Lewis is not guilty of encouraging and instigating this strike?"

The Virginia statesman's implication is clear. If Lewis is guilty of fomenting the strike which has just been settled by the tragic spectacle of government knuckling down to labor's worst hoodlum, then the United Mine Workers' chief is certainly liable to prosecution under the Smith-Connally anti-strike law.

So tell us, Mr. President, just when do you intend to proceed against this skulking public enemy whose low gangster tactics have defiled the orderly processes of law and order?

Or is it true, as Senator Byrd has said, that Lewis has been "coddled so much by the leaders of our government he now believes he is bigger than government itself."

Failure on your part, Mr. President, to denounce Lewis for what he is will be a tacit admission that this traitorous labor dictator has in some manner acquired a proprietary interest in the White House and therefore is immune to Presidential displeasure.

The President's shameful efforts to appease Lewis and still sidestep the sting of public contempt reminds one of the man who was hit by an automobile while trying to duck a street car.

Senator Byrd probably scored a bulls-eye when he said: "All officials of the government treat John L. Lewis with such awe and unctious deference as to make the ORDINARY CITIZEN wonder . . . Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed, that he is grown so great?"

were: Warren P. Snyder, superintendent of the Bristol schools; Lester Michels, supervisor of vocational training; Frank Kelly, instructor in machine shop. All of the addresses dealt with the operation, maintenance and management of the Bristol Vocational School and its importance to the community.

The first speaker, Mr. Michels, told how the vocational school is set up on a federal basis and is financed by federal funds paid out of the receipts of federal taxes.

The vocational school originated here after request had been made for such a school because of the inadequate supply of trainees for war production in the industries here.

The building used is commonly called "The Old Wood street building" being located on Wood street, adjacent to the Wood street school at Wood and Mulberry streets.

"The building is not noted for its attractiveness from the exterior, but is one of the finest equipped machine shops I have ever seen," said the speaker.

The speaker enlightened the Rotarians about the number of girls being trained in the school by Mr.

Kelly. He said that the average age is from 18 to 20, and that while learning the girls are paid a minimum wage. "After they have completed the course and have been approved by Mr. Kelly then they are given employment at the Fleetwings plants."

Since the school was established over 2000 have been trained and completed the course. "It is a big help in the production of the essentials of war which are made here in Bristol."

"The road from dishpan to capable worker is completed in eight weeks of training."

The speaker said that vocational training is more difficult now than ever as nearly all of it is sheet metal work, and he said that the students are nearly all girls.

Night classes are taught by George Ardrey, lower Bucks County's veteran machinist "who is teaching a fine job." Mr. Surrick teaches classes two other nights during the week.

The Rotarians were invited to visit the school and to see at first hand just what is being done. In Harry Barth presided, there being two members of the board absent.

A representative of a collection agency was present, the matter of collection of overdue taxes being considered by the board.

The purchase of a piano for the

Andrew Jackson, principal of the school, announced that pupils are donating the sum of $100 to the county superintendent's office, this money to be used toward purchase of a film library, through which all schools of the county will benefit. its previous record more than recommends it to local playgoers.

The cast of "The Ghost Train" includes students who have had much previous experience in school and contest plays. The role of the mysterious station master is being taken by William Foster, who last year starred in "Where the Cross is Made." Romantic interest is provided by two young couples, played by Florence Carson, John Diamond, Andree Lathrop and Jack Kidd. Humorous character parts are handled skillfully by Katherine Vandergrift and Howard Wink.

Gloria Clauser, who is new to the Bensalem stage, is interpreting a highly dramatic role in a pleasing and satisfying manner. Other parts are handled capably by Penn Salmon, James DeGour, and Robert Scheer.

The setting of a typical country railroad station and the elaborate sound effects required to make the play a success are being developed by a student committee under the supervision of Mr. A. Kleinsorg, who is also working with Miss Jane Kohler in the direction of the play. The student council is in charge of the management of the play, with Regina Silva chairman of the ticket committee and Matilda Linn a William Foster in charge of advertising.

O Thou Who are All-wise and All-powerful, Our Father Who Art in Heaven, we thank Thee that Thou hast not left us in the darkness of this world without a light to direct our pathway. We thank Thee for Thy Holy Word, given unto us that we might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing, we might have life through His Name. May we use Thy Word to direct us in making our decisions. May we use Thy Word in determining principles of action in our lives. Bunnies Rate Better Season Record Than The Jerseyites

A close game is expected tomorrow afternoon on the local high school gridiron as Bristol high plays its traditional rival from across-the-river, Burlington high school. The annual "Little Brown Jug" classic will get under way at 2.15 o'clock sharp.

According to the figures, the Bunnies have a better season record than the Jerseyites. Bristol has won five, lost one, and tied one while the Burlington boys have won two and lost two and participated in one tie score. If comparative scores mean anything, Burlington should have the edge for it succeeded in holding Riverside to a pair of touchdowns, while Riverside beat Bristol by four touchdowns.

Coach "Charlie" Utz is making no predictions on the outcome of the tilt. He claims that Bristol, as a rule, is always at its best against Burlington and stands a good chance of taking the little brown jug back to Bristol. Burlington has been in possession of the jug for the past three years.

The Red and Gray lineup is still intact. Leo Fiorelli, who was injured in the Bensalem game, is back in uniform and although he received quite a banging against Langhorne, Joe McDevitt is in condition to start at the fullback position.

Coach Utz pulled a surprise last week when he started Conklin at center against Langhorne, giving "Mickey" Mandio a much needed rest. The rest proved profitable for when Langhorne started its third march in the third quarter, it was Mandio who was breaking through to stop the plays and bring the march to a halt.

Mandio will be at center against Burlington, with the guards being Jim Fallon and Joe Centonzi. The tackles will be Cordisco and Janucci, with Snyder and Fisher starting at end. Childs appeared good at the end position against Langhorne and will be in action at this post before the game is over. Joe Elmer and Collins will be the halfbacks with "Tubby" Orvola having a fine chance to draw a starting post. Leo Johnson will call the signals.

Plexiglas Cups Aid

an announcement made today by Rohm and Haas Co., which firm provides the plastic for this new medical invention.

alleviation of human ills, is turning a product used to great extent in the war against the Axis—manufacture of bomber noses, gun turrets, etc.—toward a great humanitarian cause.

The new type buffer of plexiglas used by outstanding surgeons in the medical world, was originated by Dr. Paul H. Harmon, surgeon at the Robert Packard Hospital, Sayre.

Plexiglas, transparent to X-rays as well as to visible light, makes it possible for the surgeon to follow the course of the disease when the cap is in place. Previously, several other substances, including celluloid, glass and steel, has been used for the purpose. Plexiglas, however, because it is slightly flexible and unaffected by body fluids, has proved more satisfactory. More than half the cases treated by means of the plexiglas cups have been reported as showing excellent improvement in active motion, with virtually complete loss of pain. The majority of the cases treated have been in the hip joints, but the technique has also been employed on finger and other joints.
